CATHEDRAL OF THE HOLY FAMILY

MOST HOLY TRINITY SUNDAY

TRINITARIAN LIFE: LIVING INSIDE THE SACRED HEART OF JESUS

The wound in Christ's side, the wellspring of living water, remains open in the risen body of the Saviour. The deep wound inflicted by the lance and the wounds of the crown of thorns that customarily appear in representations of the Sacred Heart are an inseparable part of this devotion, in which we contemplate the love of Christ who offered himself in sacrifice to the very end. The heart of the risen Lord preserves the signs of that complete self-surrender, which entailed intense sufferings for our sake. It is natural that the faithful should wish to respond not only to this immense outpouring of love, but also to the suffering that the Lord chose to endure for the sake of that love.

Pope Pius XI wished to ground this particular devotion in the realization that the mystery of our redemption by Christ's passion transcends, by God's grace, all boundaries of time and space. On the cross, Jesus offered himself for all sins, including those yet to be committed, including our own sins. In the same way, the acts we now offer for his consolation, also transcending time, touch his wounded heart. "If, because of our sins too, as yet in the future but already foreseen, the soul of Jesus became sorrowful unto death, it cannot be doubted that at the same time he derived some solace from our reparation, likewise foreseen, at the moment when 'there appeared to him an angel from heaven', in order that his heart, oppressed with weariness and anguish, might find consolation. And so even now we can and ought to console that Most Sacred Heart, which is continually wounded by the sins of thankless men."

Those words of Pius XI merit serious consideration. When Scripture states that believers who fail to live in accordance with their faith "are crucifying again the Son of God" or when Paul, offering his sufferings for the sake of others, says that, "in my flesh I am completing what is lacking in Christ's afflictions", or again, when Christ in his passion prays not only for his disciples at that time, but also for "those who will believe in me through their word," all these statements challenge our usual way of thinking. They show us that it is not possible to sever the past completely from the present, however difficult our minds find this to grasp. The Gospel, in all its richness, was written not only for our prayerful meditation, but also to enable us to experience its reality in our works of love and in our interior life. The temporal distinctions that our minds employ appear incapable of embracing the fullness of this experience of faith, which is the basis both of our union with Christ in his suffering and of the strength, consolation and friendship that we enjoy with him in his risen life.

We see, then, the unity of the paschal mystery in these two inseparable and mutually enriching aspects. The one mystery, present by grace in both these dimensions, ensures that whenever we offer some suffering of our own to Christ for his consolation, that suffering is illuminated and transfigured in the paschal light of his love. We share in this mystery in our own life because Christ himself first chose to share in that life. He wished to experience first, as Head, what he would then experience in his Body, the Church: both our wounds and our consolations. When we live in God's grace, this mutual sharing becomes for us a spiritual experience. In a word, the risen Lord, by the working of his grace, mysteriously unites us to his passion. The hearts of the faithful, who experience the joy of the resurrection, yet at the same time desire to share in the Lord's passion, understand this. They desire to share in his sufferings by offering him the sufferings, the struggles, the disappointments and the fears that are part of their own lives. Nor do they experience this as isolated individuals, since their sufferings are also a participation in the suffering of the mystical Body of Christ, the holy pilgrim People of God, which shares in the passion of Christ in every time and place. The devotion of consolation, then, is in no way ahistorical or abstract; it becomes flesh and blood in the Church's pilgrimage through history.

It provides a wonderful opportunity to help others, and to socialize with other helpful members! Some of the members' most gratifying times are when they volunteer their time and talent in the company of their sisters in Christ. It also fosters an enriched community life! We say Happy Father's Day to all the fathers today. We honor fathers acknowledging their love, guidance, and support in family life. Father's Day was founded in Spokane, Washington in 1910 by Sonora Smart Dodd. Her father, the Civil War veteran William Smart was a single parent who raised his six children there. A father holds his child's hand for a short while, but he holds his/her heart forever!
